

Three Streetlights

A Short Story by Christine La bella

This is placeholder text for the short story Three Streetlights. Replace this file with the real story, exported or printed to PDF.

There were three streetlights between the bus stop and her apartment, and on the coldest nights she counted them the way other people counted stairs.

One. Two. Three. Home.

...

Placeholder story — replace downloads/three-streetlights.pdf with the real story.